4. NOTABLE FEATURES, HISTORICAL SIGNIFICANCE AND DESCRIPTION OPEN TO PUBLIC Built as a spring house for the estate "Keyburn" constructed about 1855, this structure has survived demolition of the other structures on the property in the 1920's. The land was subdivided for building lots. The Tuscan villa style spring house is interesting in the fact that it is a surviving example of the style in Lutherville. Closely spaced scrolled brackets support the moulded cornice of the eaves and low hipped roof. Of note is the doorway below grade, reached by a few steps down, and small window above it with louvered blinds. The character of the spring house's detail is not unlike that of the main house which had a mansard roof and a Tuscan columned veranda with cast iron railings as seen in the old photograph of the house. The gate post in the foreground of the old photograph still survives. It is said that this structure is probably part of the so-called "Gardener's Cottage" seen in the other accompanying photograph of an unestablished date. A structure of the spring house's height and general proportion appears at the far left.
